Let us unite in the spirit of devotion, seeking divine grace and singing his divine glory!

Every day during the dark half of the month, the moon, and symbolically its counterpart in man, the Mind, wane, and a fraction is diminished; its power declines - and finally, on the fourteenth night, Chaturdashi, there is just a wee bit left, that is all. If a little extra effort is made that day by the Spiritual aspirant, even that bit can be wiped off and Manonigraha (mastery of the mind) completed. The Chaturdashi of the dark half is therefore called Shivaratri, for that night should be spent in the repetition and meditation on the lord Shiva, without any other thought either of food or sleep. Then success is assured. And, once a year, on Maha Shivaratri night, a special spurt of spiritual activity is recommended, so that what is Shavam (corpse) can become Shivam (God) by the removal of this dross called Mind.

-Divine Discourse, 07 February 1959.
